Kentucky News Cullings

An epitome of the most important events transpiring throughout the state

Princeton—Earl Hardick, 20, died after being struck by a passenger train here. He had been married three months.

Cynthiana—Bert Braggle and James Sturgood, accused of an attempt to wreck an L & N. passenger train, were tried in Juvenile Court here and acquitted. Both boys proved an alibi.

Frankfort—Miss Kate Melvin, acting temporarily as a rural mail carrier, was injured when the horse became unmanageable and threw her from the wagon after the shaft broke.

Covington—Curtis Gent, 23, charged with murder at Hazard, Ky., was arrested with two companions by Detectives James Higgins, Mason Parker and John Drees as they approached the Covington end of the suspension bridge on their way to Cincinnati.

Frankfort—Kentucky gasoline wholesalers will be permitted to give bond to the state and collect one cent a gallon tax, State Tax Commission announces. A recent order provided that county clerks were to make the collections.

Hazard—County Judge Joshua A. Shultz officially called for a bond issue of $500,000 for road building. A large part of this amount would be spent in the construction of Perry County's part of the Kentucky-Virginia highway from Lexington to Poundgap, Va.

Frankfort—Grayson County farmers have used a total of twenty-eight carloads of limestone in two months in their efforts to improve soils of the county, according to County Agent R. W. Scarce. They have contracted the entire output of a quarry in an adjoining county.

Horse Cave—James Allen Scott, merchant of Cenler, this county, and vice president of the First National Bank of Horse Cave, attempted suicide. Mr. Scott cut his throat with a razor, in a barn near his home, and is not expected to live.

Louisville—Herman Berry, 10, 1135 South Eighteenth street, was shot thru the head while assisting residents in the vicinity of Twenty-second street and Broadway, and police of the Seventh District killing a dog that had terrorized the vicinity through the day.

Columbia—Hon. Sam Lewis, who was ousted from the chairmanship of the Republican Executive Committee of Adair County, August 7, and who had appealed to the State Central Committee, has announced that he will not contest the action of the local committee and has resigned the chairmanship.

Harlan—Frank Clem attempted suicide here by drinking four ounces of iodine. His ease in the Harlan Circuit Court for the killing of Henry Howard last March was docketed for trial and it was while on his way to the courthouse that he drank the poison. Prompt medical aid soon restored him.

Louisville—Gambling at the State Fair came to an abrupt halt when, on complaint of citizens to the Board of Public Safety, no license was given to every concessionaire where paddle wheels, games of chance or similar devices are operated, that arrests would follow if the devices were continued in operation with any element of chance.

Frankfort—J. G. Webb, a jeweler of Corbin, Ky., and G. J. Jarvis, of Frankfort, formerly a clerk in the land record office, were indicted by the Franklin County grand jury on charges of forging land records. The alleged forgeries involve 9,000 acres of land in what is known as "Treaty of Tellico lands" in Northern Tennessee, valued at approximately $25,000.

Louisville—William J. Monahan, suing thru Attorney James R. Parr, is demanding $5,150 damages from the Louisville and Interurban Railroad Company. Monahan claims that a traction car owned by the defendant collided with his truck at Buechel and that he was thrown from his seat to the ground by the impact, and sustained injuries.

Lexington—The modern dance, joy riding, improper dress, especially at the bathing beach, legalized gambling and motion pictures were scored in a report of a committee on "public morals" at the closing session of the one hundred and thirty-seventh annual session of the Elkhorn Baptist Association, composed of thirty-three churches in seven central Kentucky counties.

Frankfort—Word has been received here of the death, in Cleveland of William Force Crownwell, 29, who was injured in an auto accident there. Crownwell was a son of William Crownwell, who was clerk of the Kentucky Senate many years.

Whitesburg—Perry County's Fiscal Court has called for an election to vote on road bonds in the sum of $300,000, for good road work in the county, and it is expected that the issue will carry. So far, Perry County has no modern roads.

Hopkinsville—Reports to the organization committee of the Dark Tobacco Growers' Association here showed 117,000 acres pledged to the organization. Committee members expressed confidence that the requisite two-thirds acreage would be pledged.

Pineville—Jesse Hayden was seriously injured and seven other occupants of an auto hurt when it sideswiped a telephone pole in an effort to avoid a head-on collision with another machine.

Louisville—A. J. Goery, of Lexington, a racehorse owner staying at the Seelbach Hotel, slipped upon the sidewalk in front of Sillivan & Brach's Cafe on Market street, and suffered a gash on his head.

Whitehouse—John D. Boggs, 28, formerly of Virginia, was killed by falling slate at Potter's Fork, in the coal fields of this county. Boggs died within a few hours following the accident. He leaves a wife and family at Potter's Fork.

Frankfort—The deficit in the general fund of the state treasury has been reduced $67,835.50 since September 1. It was stated by State Treasurer James A. Wallace. On September 1, the general fund was overdrawn $350,492, and the overdraft was $289,167.50. State finance officials estimate that the overdraft should completely disappear.

Paducah—Seeking to collect fifty dollars from the county in payment for services rendered in the conviction of an alleged violator of the prohibition law, Jack Nelson, city detective, has filed suit in McCracken Circuit Court against the county. A bill for fifty dollars was presented to the county by Mr. Nelson, but the Fiscal Court refused to allow the amount specified.

Frankfort—All of the public institutions in Franklin County were found to be in good condition and well in the report of the Franklin County grand jury made to Judge Sam Hurst here. The jury returned thirty indictments most of which were not made public because of the fact that defendants have not been apprehended.

The jury recommended that the patrol system of repairing county highways be adopted by the Fiscal Court.

Glasgow—Hamp West, merchant at Slovall Crossing, shot and wounded Lon Pursley, wealthy farmer of the same name, here. The men were driving in the southern part of town when the shooting took place. West claims they were in an argument and he thought Pursley was going to shoot him. Pursley claims that there had been no trouble and that he did not know West was mad until he shot him. The bullet struck Pursley in the heart.

Hopkinsville—The district game warden has been here for several days and has begun to round up men who are charged with violation of the game laws. Two prominent citizens have been fined $20 each and costs for hunting without a license. It is understood that the game warden has fifty more other names, most of which are hunting without license, but some for exceeding the bag limit and a few for hunting out of season.

Murray—Murray, victor in the contest for the location of the new Western Normal School, feels that it has been, in a sense, misrepresented in a large section of the public press. The reason is that the many advantages which this city offers were not dwelt on, nor was the fact stressed that Murray satisfies the recommendation of the commission that a smaller city is preferable for the location of a normal school than a large one.

Louisville—The Sinking Fund Commission made public figures on tax collections from the Kentucky Jockey Club, showing that the organization has raised this city a little less than $300,000 for the privilege the club exercises in operating pari-mutuel machines during the spring and fall meetings. Cash collected by the Sinking Fund Commission from all sources for the spring and fall meetings amounted to $20,475, which includes licenses on pari-mutuel machines, jockeys and trainers.

Lexington—Forty Nelson County farmers accompanied by County Agent C. L. Hill, recently joined in an automobile tour which took them to the College of Agriculture farm at Lexington and other points of interest in the bluegrass section. After inspecting the various lines of work being carried on at the college farm, the visitors continued their trip to prominent farms in that section. Sixty farm boys from Campbell County, headed by County Agent H. F. Link, joined the Nelson County party at Lexington.

Frankfort—Immediate abandonment of Plevadine High School, in Fayette County, and placing of public schools of the county within legal reach of all pupils by some means or other, is urged upon Supt. George Baker and the Fayette County Board of Education by State Supt. George Colvin. In a letter made public here, The pupils of Plevadine should attend the Lexington City High School, the superintendent believes. The Fayette situation grew out of his sale of trucks by which the county in recent years transported children to the consolidated schools. This, according to the superintendent, has left some children beyond legal reach of the schools.

Frankfort—Word has been received here of the death, in Cleveland of William Force Crownwell, 29, who was injured in an auto accident there. Crownwell was a son of William Crownwell, who was clerk of the Kentucky Senate many years.

Whitesburg—Perry County farmland sold for an average of $55 an acre in 1921 as compared with $65 in 1920. The minimum in 1921 was $20 an acre and the maximum $100 and for 1920 the minimum was $35 and the maximum $150.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

At the school fair Saturday a number of citizens heartily endorsed the Courier's suggestion in last week's issue in regard to a county fair, and it would be a comparatively easy task to interest enough of our farmers and business men to organize the company.

It was estimated that two thousand people were here to attend the school fair Saturday. If our people will attend in that number a one-day school fair it is safe to assume that they would attend in greater numbers if we had a permanent county fair and the added attractions it brings. Figuring on that basis, however, it would mean $4,000 for admissions with a four-day fair, and the concessions could be sold for a considerable sum. There might not be any big profits made, but the stimulus to the agricultural interests of the county would be big pay.

From five to ten thousand dollars would be ample capital, and 100 men taking $100 stock each would make a $10,000.00 Capitalization. What enterprising citizen will undertake the organization of the county fair? Let's get it organized at once and get on the premium lists and get ready to work.

E THE ROAD BOND ELECTION.

Owing to an error in the advertising of the election for the road bonds the election had to be postponed till Dec. 2. In looking up the law it was found that part of the statute in regard to advertising had not been complied with, and in order to make the election legal the whole matter had to be readvertised.

While this will put the election off for some weeks it should only make the majority for the bonds bigger, as there will be more time for the people to think the matter over, and the more they think it over the bigger the majority for the bonds will be.

The time has come when every progressive citizen sees the necessity for good roads, and seeing the necessity for them comes his willingness to pay for their building. It will not delay the construction of the road to postpone the election as no work could have been done this winter. With the bonds voted, however, the work of grading will be begun in the early spring, and the Paris-Paintsville project will soon be completed.

E THE SCHOOL FAIR.

The attendance at the School fair here Saturday demonstrates that the farmers and the school people are awake to the possibilities of the county's advancement along agricultural and educational lines. It was a revelation to many who had not been keeping in touch with the school officers and the county agent.

With the building of good roads the farming interests of Morgan county will assume a brighter aspect and the business of farming will take on a more prosperous phase. Morgan county could produce much more than she needs for her own consumption if she had markets for her products.

E

The Normal School Commission, it is said, will meet early in October to try to agree upon a location for the eastern Kentucky School. Doubtless the Commission will give the claims of West Liberty more careful consideration in view of the deadlock that has developed in their deliberations. It is unfortunate for the whole of the mountains that the erroneous idea that West Liberty is not easy of access seems to have possessed the minds of the Commission. If they could beshow the truth that West Liberty is easier to reach from more of the mountain counties than any other town asking the school their task would be easier.

E

We are going to see the Paris-Paintsville road finished shortly, and this will be one of the most important highways in the State. It will connect the head of the Big Sandy and the upper Licking with the blue grass sections of the State. The freight transportation over this road will be enormous, and it will be a favorite route for tourists. Citizens of West Liberty should look ahead and prepare to reap the advantages that the road will bring. Now is the time to get busy on our civic improvements. The light plant, ice plant, cannery factory, and other talked of enterprises should be gotten under way at once. The beauty of the town will attract tourists and we should be prepared to make their stay with us as pleasant as possible.

DEATHS.

We inadvertently omitted to mention in last issue the death of Mrs. Vina Engle, who died of appendicitis at her home near Index on the 15th. She was an aged and respected woman and much loved in that community. She was buried in the Noah Elam graveyard, Rev. C. L. Wilson conducting the funeral services. She is survived by eight children: J. D., Clifton, Boyd and Harlan, Meldannes Mandy Brown, Betty Hausey, McKinley Williams and Edgar Manning.

Jerred Gross, 20 year old son of George Gross, of near town, died at the home of his father Wednesday morning of tuberculosis. He had been confined to his room for about three months. He will be buried in the Howard graveyard today.

Here's the story in brief:

The first Congress was called upon to decide upon a location for the Capital of these United States.

Thomas Jefferson, then Secretary of State under President Washington, wanted it at Columbus, Ky.

If you would know why his plan failed—why Washington was finally selected as the Capital—

This is but one of the many interesting stories of little known facts about the 120 counties of Kentucky which will come from the pen of the Louisville Post's gifted special writer, Mr. Ralph Coghlan.

Some of the others are: The story of Fluorspar, one of the most valuable metals in industry. How Paducah got its High School gymnasium. When King George ate Kentucky ham. The county which does not contain one illiterate child. Mayfield, "the old-fashioned girl," who surpassed the country club flapper in everything really worth while. How $300,000 was spent by one county to get out of the mud. When President Tyler was coal miner in Kentucky.

This series will begin Monday, October 2, and continue daily thereafter. Don't miss the first one.

Telegraphic World News

Because of the difference in time most foreign news breaks best for the evening metropolitan papers. The latest, up-to-the-minute, dependable foreign news is a worth-while feature of the Louisville Post. Its bond and market reports are not only accurate, but complete up to the closing of the New York market.

Political Articles of Special Interest

The famous Washington letters of David Lawrence appear exclusively in the Louisville Post. Sterling Americanism—America and Kentucky first, last and always—is the keynote of the virile Post editorials.

WHAT WE READ.

It is claimed that the "Five Foot Shelf of Books" contains all the lore that man needs, but judging by what we do read, who wants to read that set of books? I am coupled off on that train of thought after wading through a few Sunday papers and several magazines. When we consider the vast mass of printed matter that comes daily from the printing presses we wonder what its effect is upon the minds of the readers.

However, few read any considerable part of the mass of print that is turned out each day. Take the dailies, for instance. No one reads all of them. There is a part that appeals to each, and to him the remainder is wasted. One man will read the financial news and throw the paper down. The sport page is all that appeals to another. All, it is true, scan the first page for the news headlines, but no one reads all of the paper. They could not, if they had anything else to do.

Books are pouring from the printing presses in endless volume—fiction, scientific, poetry, essays, and on every conceivable topic. How many of them are generally read, and how many and which is the average person to read? To read even the book reviews would require several lifetimes. And again, how many of the books that are printed are worth reading, nad how are we to know which? What must the busy man do to keep abreast the reading public and why? Who is able to show us the way out?

There is no question but that every man and woman should do a certain amount of reading. No life can complete that does not gather inspiration and higher ideals from reading. It is the printing press that has made the marvelous progress of the world possible. Development would have been impossible with the aid of the press. No discovery could have been saved but for the "art preservative of arts." But the question is: Are there too many books being printed?

To the boy or girl beginning life reading is the all important problem. The character is largely formed by what they read first—by the character of the books from which they get their first thought direction, for all that is read leaves an imperishable impression, nad the character of the thoughts of a lifetime are shaped by the nature of the early reading. The thought of the books read will be the dominant thoughts of the reader. It is inevitable. Even in mature persons the thoughts of the books they read become their thoughts and materially affect their lives.

Thus is that what we read is of more importance to us than what we eat. Improper food causes illness of the body and lack of proper physical development. Improper reading causes mental illness and improper development of the mind and soul. Bad food quickly indicates that something is wrong and gives warning before it is too late to be cured. Unwholesome reading seldom shows its baneful results until it is too late to remedy the evil. The effect of one book or article is not noticeable, but continuing in the same line fixes the ideas of the author as your own ideas, and they will be the dominating ideas of your life. It is hard to correct bad thinking.

The saving part of the situation is that there is not as much reading as the amount of printing turned out would indicate. If all that is printed should be read the world would be hopelessly damned—the Congressional Record, for instance—but happily not much that is printed is read. True, a little of all that is printed is read, that is, some parts of all is read, but no great number of people read all of any thing. Things that go counter to our ideas are put aside as unworthy of our attention when they touch on things about which we have positive opinions. We don't suffer much from political reading, for we inherit our political faith.

The effort of the modern school is to try to inculcate in the mind of the youth a love for pure and uplifting literature. It usually succeeds in a way, but not in the way intended. The average boy or girl finishing a "course in literature" is nearly cured of the reading habit. Unless the literature given him appeals to him he doesn't want to study it, and when compelled to study it he detests it ever afterward. Putting classic gems, which are beyond the comprehension of the student, before a boy or girl, is one way of destroying his taste for the classics. Ask some boy and get knowledge first hand.

G

As an evidence of this, ask the average rural teacher what he or she reads. I believe that there is less general reading among the rural teachers than any other calling, and it is an open question whether they are or are not right. Voluminous and haphazard reading causes one to lose the power of concentration, and perhaps it is best for the teacher to stick to his job.

Rheumatism and Dyspepsia Are Soon Ended.

Victims of stomach trouble and rheumatism often find that when their stomach is set to order the rheumatism disappears. Thousands of people everywhere have testified that Tanac has freed them of both troubles simultaneously. Mr. Robert Trotter, 148 State St., St. Paul, Minn., says:

"About a year ago I began to go down hill. Sour stomach and rheumatism in my arms and shoulders kept me in misery all the time. Since taking Tanac all my aches and pains have gone, and my stomach is in fine shape. I'm glad to endorse such a fine medicine."

Badly digested food fills the whole system with poisons. Rheumatism and many other complaints not generally recognized as having their origin in the stomach quickly respond to the right treatment. Get a bottle today at any good druggist—Advertisement.

Mixed In Her History. She did not appear to be over twenty years old and you would have guessed she was fairly familiar with things of a historical nature; but as she stood by one of the monuments that grace our beautiful city, she said: "I wonder what John Paul Jones, famous for his wonderful ride during the revolutionary period, would think if he could come back and see the thousands of autos that daily pass this statue." Oh, shade of Paul Revere!—Washington Star.

The sphinx got a reputation for being wise by keeping its mouth shut for 3,000 years.

MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS.

Read This Letter from Mrs. W. S. Hughes.

Greenvale, Del.—"I was under the impression that my eldest daughter had some internal trouble as ever since the first time her physician prescribed she had to go to bed and even had to quit school once for a week. I always take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound myself so I gave it to her and she has received great benefit from it. You can see this letter for a testimonial if you wish, as I cannot say too much about what your medicine has done for me and for my daughter." —M. W. W. 8. 312 Union, Greenville, Delaware.

Mothers oftentimes grandmothers have taken and have learned the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So they recommend the medicine to others.

The best test of any medicine is what it has done for others. For nearly fifty years we have published letters from mothers, daughters, and women, young and old, recommending the Vegetable Compound. They know what it did for them and are glad to tell others. In your own neighborhood are women who know of its great value!

"Do you suppose jazz musicians will go to heaven?"

"Maybe so," replied Mr. Grumpson.

"According to the modern idea, nearly everybody's going to heaven, but I won't present my credentials to St. Peter until I find out whether or not they'll have to check their horns at the gate."

Hard Labor.

"Well," said the shoe drummer, "what's going on in Chigerville to-day?"
